

It's sad, really. We have spent billions of dollars freeing other countries from the tyranny that has destroyed them. Open dictators, who have maimed, raped and killed their own people for personal gain. We condemn them to death or life imprisonment.

What a joke. We give them cable TV, a college degree, and all the food they can eat, while we, who work 40+ hours a week, struggle to have a shelter over our heads and food in our stomach. We are being oppressed by a much more sinister villain than Saddam Hussein or Adolf Hitler or Joseph Stalin. These men were up front and honest about their beliefs, and the direction they wanted to lead their followers. Granted, their ideals were wrong, murderous, and treacherous, but at least they told the people what they meant.

Where to start... How about with large corporations? Their objective is the total breaking of the will of their employees. Yes, we have some of the highest pay in the world, but we are oppressed, told that our "self-evident" rights are null and void as long as we are working for that company, such as our right to free speech. Within reason, we should be able to express interest in a member of the opposite sex without having to fear a lawsuit. If we disagree with our superiors, we should be able to tell them without fearing for the security of our job.

In addition to this, we are told at an interview that the company cares, that the company loves us, yet the second we stop giving our lives and souls to the company, we are told that we are no longer good employees. When mandatory unpaid overtime is daily, and when an employee wants to spend time with his dying family members, he is told that his job is more important, we are in sad shape.

Next, when our honor is insulted, and our bodies and minds are assaulted by all forms of scum, we are refused the right to defend ourselves. The victims have become the bad guys, and the criminals have become the righteous. What the hell is wrong with us? When a young man breaks into a house with a gun, fires at two police officers, and is killed by a hail of police gunfire, the police are put on trial! If a man breaks into a house, murders the wife, rapes the daughter, beats the husband, and robs them blind, then slips and breaks his ankle on their icy driveway, the widower with the bastard grandchild of the criminal is sued! A criminal tries to mug a woman, who happens to be carrying a gun, if she defends herself, she is tried for murder, and for illegal possession of a firearm.

I heard someone say earlier, "one nation under the dollar, with liberty and justice for none." And that is so true. Large corporations are given leeway to do things that are unethical and illegal, while the rights of the citizens, the ones that are "self evident," according to our founding fathers, are denied and robbed from us. So screw them, and the horse they all rode in on. If I want to speak my mind, I will. If I want to tell a girl she is gorgeous, I will. And for God's sake, if I want to carry a gun, I will. My constitution is declared today, and it is the American one, forged by our founding fathers more than 225 years ago. I believe in it, you say you believe in it, and if you do, stand beside me.
